So, I hope these images can make you happy even if you're not in the jungle! We spent the day going back and forth to the waterfalls in the jungle. There are two: Diamantina and "The Crying Snake" waterfall. Some people were already there, so they had some nice shots. (I tried to put some pictures of the snakes to see if I could make them clearer.) Despite the greenish walls and the verdant colors, I LOVE this place. Can you see how much (this picture is taken on my phone camera) the conditions and the lighting change a lot? At the end, it was a lot easier to do my business and I also finished my course of antibiotics to prevent the first attack of malaria.One fatal case of respiratory syncytial virus infection in a child with congenital heart disease. Airline Management 4 is a business simulation game. In this game, you can experience the most common and important activities of a transport company. The game is played like a business simulation. Your task is to run the airline company and improve its profitability. In addition to transport operations, you manage flight control, aircraft maintenance, fuel contracts, staff management, passenger transport and cargo. The management of an airline company has never been more fun. But don't take this business simulation game lightly. Not only you have to manage your employees and airlines. You also have to keep an eye on the costliness of your fleet. You have to collect money all the time. The raw materials are money. The fuel is money. All the contracts with the partners are money. And the raw materials are money. Everything. You have to choose routes. Based on which routes you choose, you have to pay either a part of fuel or a part of the landing fees. You can also order your staff to carry out certain activities.

So you need to control your employees to keep them happy and avoid possible issues. These actions increase your rank. The result of your actions will be shown on a chart that depicts the ratio of generated profit. You have to keep that ratio as high as possible. Because otherwise you will go bankrupt. You can even see the level of stress of your employees on the map of the airline company. Features: -60+ real aircraft types to fly. -Customizable seat options. -Repair your planes. -Buy fuel and seats to optimize profits. -Run the operations of your airline company on real maps with a detailed flight schedule. -Many different airlines and airports around the world. -Build or join alliances to get contracts. -Makes you a Business tycoon. -Design your own airline strategy. -Play a sound Career advice and earn money on your income. -Much more... --- Key features of Airline Manager 4: * 60+ aircraft models * Realistic 3D models * Repair planes * Buy fuel and seats * Many different airlines and airports * Airlines and Transport companies can invest in one another * Many different alliances * Track your flights live * Use current weather * Choose your own route (variant: GPS or pre-set) * Choose between two

For example, I have two ArrayLists of Contact (person) objects and I want to merge the two into a new array based on whether they are related (has a relationship to a third object). Any guidance on the best way to go about this? Here are some methods I have tried: ArrayList mergeRecursively(ArrayList a, ArrayList b) { ArrayList merge = new ArrayList(); for(int i = 0; i : Hope on Mars Sol 705 30 October 2016 Yesterday's plan called for a 6-hour Sol 704 to experience total solar eclipses, take images of the sky, take some photos of the sky and of the rover and experience a 6 hour SEXTANT sunset. But the robot's SUBSAT service was down (note: Sol 704 is now eclipsed, and the SEXTANT sunset is about to begin) SOL 705 WEB UPDATE: The GOOD news is that the SUBSAT service has been restored for the rest of the weekend! But there is no backup communication capability to the lander, the drillers, or ground controllers. So when we have RESTORED SUBSAT service for the rest of the weekend, we will do 7 hours of science on Sol 705. The sunset WAS A TOTAL Solar Eclipse of 3.7 seconds (and they are still counting it, and it will still be complete in a few minutes). The rover took the best image of the Sun that it has EVER taken (they have upsampled images on-board to improve the signal), and I'm going to do some in-situ spectra to get a better sense of what is really going on with the Sun. The SEXTANT STOP worked, and the sun stopped moving across the sky, and the solar SA could be collected. Since this is the first time a SEXTANT has been used at Mars, and no sun cameras or other solar-viewing technology has ever been used at Mars before, Curiosity is supplying its own data for the first time to the science team. And the results should be interesting. The upcoming back story here is a case of an excessive dust storm on Mars for Day 6. It swept over towards the rover by Monday 6th, and has sent a dust devil rolling up the lee-side of the crater wall. It's been about 80,000 cubic meters (300,000 cubic yards) of dust since Sol 704, and a good bit over that over the 6th. This is significant. The area of the science zone where we see the sky appear to darken the most is going to be moving with the wind driven dust devils. The dust devils get their energy from the warm temperatures, which is why dust devils are such a danger to the rover. The dust devils

are also blowing dust and gases into the atmosphere which can warm
